

Bitcoin Market Sentiment vs Trader Performance Analysis

Objective: Analyze the relationship between Bitcoin Fear & Greed Index and Hyperliquid trader performance.

Dataset Summary

- Historical trades: 211,224 records
- Fear & Greed Index: 2,644 daily records
- Merged on trade date with sentiment classification.

Key Findings

1. Fear had the highest trading activity (61,837 trades), followed by Greed (50,303).
2. Average Closed PnL was highest during Extreme Greed (~67.9), while Greed averaged ~42.7.
3. Win rate peaked during Extreme Greed (~46.5%) and was lowest during Extreme Fear (~37.1%).
4. HYPE was the most traded asset, followed by @107 and BTC.
5. @107 generated the highest cumulative profit, followed by HYPE and SOL.
6. Top traders earned over $2.14M cumulative realized PnL.
7. Daily realized PnL became substantially more volatile during late 2024–2025.

Distribution of Closed PnL

Win Rate by Sentiment

Buy vs Sell by Sentiment

Top Traded Coins

Top Profitable Coins

Top 20 Traders

Daily Closed PnL

Trades by Sentiment

Average Closed PnL

Correlation Heatmap

Conclusion

Market sentiment shows a measurable relationship with trading behaviour and profitability. Extreme Greed periods achieved the highest average PnL and win rate, while HYPE dominated trading activity. The analysis demonstrates that combining sentiment indicators with trading metrics can help design more informed trading strategies.